Picture-postcard scenery provides a handsome backdrop for a master bath in Marble Falls.

Perched on a 50-acre hilltop site in Marble Falls, a contemporary house designed by architect Winn Wittman takes advantage of the surrounding scenery at every opportunity—even in the master bathroom. To keep the home from being visible from nearby roads, the house was sited just below the ridge line. “Because it’s so private, we were able to do floor-to-ceiling windows that look out for miles,” says the founder of Winn Wittman Architecture (winnwittman.com). Completed last fall, the 3,565-square-foot net-zero-energy house, built by Zbranek & Holt Custom Homes (zhcustomhomes.com), serves as the Austin-based homeowners’ Hill Country retreat. It features midcentury-modern references throughout, as well as special custom touches. Wittman designed the double floating vanities in the master bath, and Michael Brozgul of Austin’s Edwood Studio (edwoodstudios.com) created the wooden bench that penetrates the glass shower wall. Sleek lighting, brushed stainless steel plumbing fixtures and a splash of greenery complete the package.
