COZY CORNER

Architect Tobin Smith's entryway nook sets the tone for a dramatic yet relaxed style

1 / DRAMATIC OPENING

"The door is clad in anodized aluminum sheet matching the frames of the windows and glass doors," says Smith, of Tobin Smith Architect. "All the interior doors in the house are typical proportions, but the unique size and pivot of this one is noticed by all and awakens an awareness in those who pass through it."

2 / LOOKING UP

Smith wanted to call this Alamo Heights house home when he first saw the pine beams and decking. "When I walked in to tour what was a dump of a '50s house, that was what made me think, 'There's something special here, and I must possess this!'"

3 / IN PROPORTION

The Scandinavian daybed and leather poufs are low to the ground for a reason. "This part of the house is linear and horizontal. Although the ceiling height is generous, tall furniture would have been out of place and contrary to the spatial composition," says Smith. ★
